Chapel Hill, N. C., February 2.—The summarized report of Prof. N. W. Walker, State inspector of secondary schools, as rendered the president of the State University, relating to the growth of rural schools in the State during 1913, indicates that thirty new buildings for such schools were constructed. The cost of the buildings ranged from $5,000 to $39,000. The comment made by the State inspector of schools is that the problem of rural school development still hinges on the lack of adequate buildings and equipment.

The lack of adequate buildings and equipment. The report says that there are now in operation in the State 211 of these rural high schools with an enrollment of 7,046 pupils in the high school grades. The increase of four-year schools in 1913 was from twenty-nine to fifty-nine; the number of three-year schools decreased from eighty-nine to 101.

Prof. Walker asserts that the high schools are placing emphasis on vocational instruction, with the demand for agricultural and domestic science courses exhibiting a slow growth. The new farm-life school law, says Prof. Walker, makes it easier to have the branches of agriculture and domestic science introduced into many of the high schools.
